

Home » Travel » Planning For Your Honeymoon? Here's Why You Should Consider Fiji

Planning For Your Honeymoon? Here's Why You Should Consider Fiji

It's hard not to fall in love with this natural paradise.

By Jafri M on Jun 19, 2017

For a long time, European fantasies were the stuff of romantic honeymoons, but for the well-travelled newlywed who's probably been there and done that, nothing's more exciting than venturing to fresh destinations to celebrate their union.

One increasingly popular honeymoon location is Fiji. With its private hideaways where you can have the whole island to yourselves, glittering adults-only resorts with the beach at your doorstep, lush natural beauty and the smorgasbord of activities to bond over, from snorkelling and parasailing to world-class diving where you'll swim alongside dolphins, manta rays and turtles and encounter sea caves and ship wrecks, the 333-island archipelago (notably, just 101 of these are inhabited while the rest are nature reserves) promises a heavenly experience.

Here, our top reasons why Fiji should be on every couple's travel list—whether they're about to walk down the aisle or have been married for 40 years!

(Related: The Tatler Guide to Tulum, Mexico)

Private Island

<3/5>

Dolphin Island Resort

Fiji has 333 sun-soaked islands, of which only 110 are inhabited, while the rest are nature reserves. Within this lush tropical cluster, one can really savour private island living. Dolphin Island, for instance, offers a truly memorable experience. Not only does it proffer luxuriant lodgings, it also indulges guests with customised dining, rejuvenating spa treatments and a wide range of aquatic activities.

(Related: Travel Through The Andes In Luxury Aboard This Train)

Find out more about why Fiji is a honeymooning couple's dream in the Spring/Summer 2017 issue of Tatler Weddings.

